

PROTEST VIOLENCE CLICHÉ BINGO!

mindless anarchists	image: beautiful, pierced female protester looks winsomely at police/distance	tiny minority	descended into violence	spoiled kids
ugly scenes	alienate the public	only here to cause trouble	undermined / overshadowed legitimate protest	image: five or more identical SWP placards held just behind a photo opportunity
image: frightened, vulnerable female cop looks warily at protestors	marred by violence	FREE SPACE! (any time property damage is referred to as violence)	hijacked / infiltrated	middle-class yobs / thugs intent on violence	image: both placards in shot: "Careful Now" and "Down With This Sort Of thing"	spoiled it for everyone else	image: male cop extends baton arm back for a blow	turned ugly
violence erupted	actions of a few	utterly condemn	image: male protester in black mask gestures wildly at police / camera	professional troublemakers

THE RULES

1. Whenever a major protest occurs, a new game begins;
2. To tick off a square, you must find an example of the cliché in the print, broadcast or online media (blogs, youtube and social networks not included);
3. The first person to score a BINGO (five squares in any direction, including diagonal) and e-mail the sources to harry.lodestone@gmail.com wins a prize;
4. Some variations in language may be allowed, at the adjudicator's discretion, but may lose out in the event of a tie-break;
5. Bonus points may be awarded in a tie-break (see overleaf, or for particularly excellent submissions), entirely at the whim of the adjudicator.

Thanks to Mary Andes, Richard Brodie, Danny Chivers, Alyson MacDonald and Molly Uzzell for suggestions, and to the Daily Mail for being such an inspiration in these difficult times.
